Parkinsons disease is a disorder that affects nerve cells, or neurons, in a part of the brain that controls muscle movement. In Parkinsons, neurons that make a chemical called dopamine die or do not work properly. Dopamine normally sends signals that help coordinate your movements. No one knows what damages these cells. Symptoms of Parkinsons disease may include * Trembling of hands, arms, legs, jaw and face * Stiffness of the arms, legs and trunk * Slowness of movement * Poor balance and coordination As symptoms get worse, people with the disease may have trouble walking, talking or doing simple tasks. They may also have problems such as depression, sleep problems or trouble chewing, swallowing or speaking. For patients, practical information is provided in clearly written patient education documents. For medical professionals, doctor reference tools and texts have detailed technical information and clinical background material.
