

Surviving the War: The secret diaries of an English POW along the Thailand-Burma Railway, 1942-1945.

The first section of this book comprises a preface, introduction, various photos of Albert Moreton, transcribed copies of his army medical records, a post-war questionnaire, and a Prisoner of War record card kept by the Japanese. There is also a map of the Thailand-Burma Railway, which notes the places he stayed at, and a map of Southeast Asia. The majority of this book is what he wrote in three diaries between November 1942 and August 1945 describing his life as a POW. There is also a description of his post war life between August and December 1945 as he travels back to England. Throughout the book there are approximately 140 footnotes, which highlight similar comments in other books written by former POWs or provide an explanation to a certain word. Numerous sketches drawn by Albert as well as photographs taken during the war are also included. The last section consists of a Japanese-English dictionary, which Albert created during the war, a map of the trip home to England, an epilogue, bibliography and index. Albert Moreton's story is an important addition to the limited number of related works written during World War II about life as a POW along the Thailand-Burma Railway.
