

One Child at a Time: The Global Fight to Rescue Children from Online Predators

From a renowned investigative reporter, the true story behind a horrifying Internet abuse epidemic and the heroes who are out to stop it. The Internet has helped make child abuse terrifyingly common it is the new face of crime in the 21st century. There are tens, probably hundreds of thousands of children whose sexual abuse has been electronically recorded and distributed on the Internet. As Julian Sher reveals, the men perpetrating these crimes include lawyers, priests, doctors and politicians. They pick their victims from the streets of Bangkok to Boy Scout troops in England, while the police from a crack image analyst with the Toronto police to an FBI agent who poses as a thirteen-year-old girl online work desperately to nab the predators. One Child at a Time goes behind the headlines to show how law officers are fighting back against this tide of abuse, from daring rescues in homes to the seizures of millions of dollars in the offshore bank accounts of the porn merchants. In riveting detail, Julian Sher shows how clue by clue, and image by image, investigators are using cutting edge tools, turning the technology of the Internet against the perpetrators as they race to find and rescue the victims children who otherwise have no voice. This important book explores the ramifications of a worldwide struggle, from the need for updated legal powers to the unexpected effects the Internet has had on our social fabric. It also includes a full list of resources for concerned parents. Though sometimes harrowing, One Child at a Time is also inspiring and never less than absolutely relevant. In their efforts to rescue the child victims of one of today's most pervasive and insidious crimes, police must be creative, dogged and go well beyond the borders drawn on any map...Canadian cop Paul Gillespie changed the way that police around the world tackle Internet porn. He decided that if the system was broken, he was going to send an email to Bill Gates and ask for help. Gates not only answered, but Microsoft ended up kicking in millions of dollars, working with Gillespie's team to develop the Child Exploitation Tracking System, a searchable database to track and investigate Web predators and their victims. It soon spread across Canada, and then to the UK, Australia and the U.S. Older men pretend to be young and caring, luring lonely young girls in chat rooms. But when they show up to meet their victim, they discover the FBI is waiting to arrest them. Emily Vacher, one of the FBI's top Internet undercover operatives, specializes in trapping the predators at their own game of deception. The photos of the children's abuse were everywhere on the Net, but no one knew who or where she was. In a frantic 36-hour hunt, using CSI-type sleuthing to find clues in the pictures, Canadian, American and European police rescued a girl from North Carolina. Jim Gamble, one of the most senior police officers in the UK, has spearheaded the creation of a Virtual Global Taskforce to patrol the web 24/7. It was time for a sheriff to tame the wild, wild Web, Gamble decided. Now children have a red report abuse button on chat room software and browsers they can click any time they feel threatened. It is time for the children's stories too often hidden in the dark corners of the Web to be told. Their torment has been etched in their memories and the memories of the police officers dedicated to rescuing them. It is what scars them. But it is also what spurs them on. Because they know behind every picture or video lies a little, frightened child. Detective Sergeant Paul Gillespie of the Toronto Police's Exploited Child Unit can't shake the lingering echoes of some of the worst videos he has seen of shackled children: Sometimes, he says, you can hear the children cry. from One Child at a Time

Editorial Reviews. Review. Eye-opening . . . it reads like a thriller, complete with sting One Child at a Time: Inside the Police Hunt to Rescue Children from Online Predators - Kindle edition by Julian Sher. He has worked on investigative projects for the CBC, the Globe and Mail, the Toronto Star and the New York Times. Buy One Child at a Time: The Global Fight to Rescue Children from Online Predators by Julian Sher (ISBN: 9780679313922) from Amazons Book Store. The overall mission of the FBI's Violent Crimes Against Children program is to including sex trafficking, online child exploitation, child abductions, and child sex options and one non-criminal or civil method may be pursued when a child is The International Parental Kidnapping Crime Act (IPKCA) of 1993: A criminal Cyber child pornography: A review paper of the social and legal issues and One child at a time: The global fight to rescue children from online predators. As police crack down on child porn rings, online social networks offer that can help sexual predators exploit them, said Julian Sher, author of One Child at a Time: Inside the Fight to Rescue Children from Online Predators.: One Child at a Time: The Global Fight to Rescue Children from Online Predators (9780679313922) by Julian Sher and a great selection of The book that takes you inside the global police hunt for online child predators One Child gives readers hope, a renewed sense of direction and purpose. that there are so many out there who are fighting this cancer in our societies. as they race to find and rescue the victims-children who otherwise have no voice. Mobile technology has given children the very tools that predators need to Save 90% 171 near Stonewall one young victim of a technology-facilitated crime. Other times, predators are upfront about themselves and their intentions. .. New: Online predators may get stiffer penalties than child rapists.: One Child at a Time: The Global Fight to Rescue Children from Online Predators: NF hardcover in NF DJ. 327 pages. The compelling story of the One Child At A Time: The Global Fight to Rescue Children from Online Predators. Broadcast in Parents Mon, Apr 30, 2007 02:00PM UTC One Child at a Time: The Global Fight to Rescue Children from Online Predators by Sher, Julian 2007 Hardcover: : Julian Sher: Libros.